Sundowner Ubuntu
A Russell Quant Mystery
by Anthony Bidulka

September * ISBN: 1-897178-43-0 * Mystery, Gay literature * $21.95 * Trade paperback

When an elderly widow hires gay private eye Russell Quant to locate her son, missing for twenty years, the detective expects the trail to be cool. Sure enough, the clues are few and far between, but Quant relies on good old-fashioned legwork to get the job done, leaving no stone unturned in his search for Matthew Ridge.

Matthew was an angelic child, but as a teen he went bad. Turning a deaf ear to his mother's pleas, his father kicked him out of the house and Matthew ended up in reform school. His mother never heard from him again and now, with Russell Quant's help, she wants to make amends.

Tracking Matthew from the pleasant prairie city of Saskatoon to the poverty-stricken townships and luxurious game reserves of Africa, Quant asks a lot of questions, but soon discovers that someone will do anything to keep him from finding the answers. Every step into the missing man's past plunges Russell Quant deeper into danger. Will he find his quarry before losing his own life?

In the fifth Russell Quant novel, Anthony Bidulka takes readers on a wild safari, dodging bullets and bad guys, with time out for cocktails, canapés and canoodling as the sun goes down. Sundowner Ubuntu has all the style and suspense we've come to expect from this master of the urbane mystery.

Anthony Bidulka is an award-winning writer who, like his protagonist, lives a big life in a small city on the Canadian prairie. He also loves to travel the world—meeting people, sampling food and wine, walking sun-drenched streets, making good use of swim-up bars, and being awed.
